Sao Paulo, April 12 (Reuters) - The Brazilian producer AMBEV SA (Abev3.sa) deals More to improve the return to the capital invested that with his market share, said his CEO Jean Jereissati Neto Tuesday. "When we stop looking at the market share for the whole week, we get more free to work in the long term", said CEO during the first two days of business presentations to investors and analysts." We are now obsessed with growth. The AMBEV logo (Compania de Bebidas das Americas) is depicted in their unit in Fortaleza, Brazil January 10, 2019. In the past we have been employed from the market share ... we are now looking at the long term, places of understanding where we should grow more, understanding customers and consumers better," added the executive. Register now for FREE unlimited access to Reuters.com The first day of the company's presentations focused on the various initiatives of corporate digitization thatPart of Anheuser-Busch inbev SA (Abi.Br) of Belgium, is implementing to expand its revenue base beyond the simple sale of beverages. The strategy, according to Jereissati Neto, is to create a "ambidestrica" company, able to operate with solutions that include Ze Delivery platforms, which sells directly to consumers and bees, through which he bets on the growth between retailers. When asked about the market share, the CEO said, without detailing the numbers, that the 2021 "was by far the year in which we earned most of the market share." It was a market share gain in a depressed environment and now we seem to have the wind in our favor," said the executive, referring to the social isolation measures that ended last year in Brazil. Plans of Ambev Why the Bees platform is to maintain separate activity from the brewery, earning the scale over time while strengthening its operations in the markets in which it is already present and examining further service offerings such as "Click & Collect". He did not disclose any specific forecast. Chief Lucas Lira said that the company is permeated by "sphide macro and volatility throughout this year", but added, "After two years of pressure on demand, there is a need for consumers to reconnect." Register now for free unlimited access to Reuters.com, the CEO said that the increase in inflation has a greater impact on the company's most popular brands, while the highest ones have been "very resistant in recent years". Popular brands in Brazil include Brahma and Skol, while Stella Artois is one ofpremium company. The main goods of Ambev are in aluminum and barley, and for this reason the company has contracted the tools of coverage and focused on remanufacturable packaging to protect itself from the increase of costs, costs,he said.
